You know you have a friend for life when they answer the phone at one in the morning because you can't sleep and have a lot on your mind and they don't care about talking about nothing to get your mind off everything. When you know that if something bad happened to you they'd be there for you, no questions asked. When you can look at them when something is wrong and they know it just by their eyes and all they have to do is offer a hug and you feel a thousand times better. When you know that they'd never lie to you and would never hurt you, and if they did you know that it would only be for your benefit. They can make you laugh when skies are the darkest and they're there with a good movie and some popcorn when you're totally depressed! And even if you're a thousand miles apart, it doesn't matter because what you share with this friend is so much deeper than what lies on top of the distance that plays no role in your relationship.

Friendship is when they push you as you need it, but never too hard. They would stand back when the time is right, but never too far. And the true test of friendship is that you are willing to do it all back in a heartbeat. True friendship is when your life is so much better because you know it, and it would bring out the best that lies within.
